

Creating conversations in Croydon

Dying well takes planning

Call for volunteers 2019

The Creating Conversations in Croydon project aims to encourage local people to feel more comfortable about talking openly about death and dying. Dying is a fact of life, impacting on all of us, but some find discussing it hard and few of us make plans.

- Would you like to empower Croydon communities to have these important conversations and to offer people support in planning for the last years of life?
- Could you commit to an initial four days of free training and then join our friendly team for ongoing regular volunteering in Croydon?

Training takes place 9.30-4pm on Wednesday 27 and Friday 29 November, and Wednesday 4 and Friday 6 December at Ashburton Hall, Ashburton Park, Lower Addiscombe Road, Croydon CR0 6RX.
