

Communities play a vital role in supporting their members when faced with traumatic experiences, something which has been even more important during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Funded by a TFL grant, Croydon Council have commissioned free training for 600 people to help them to support, empower and enable people in their communities who may have experienced trauma.

There are two ways you can get involved:

1. Take part in the online consultation to help to shape the content of this training by contacting TICroydon@j3msconsulting.co.uk
2. Once the training has been finalised, sign up to attend and share information about it with people who might be interested in receiving the training too.
